W. & T. SMITH, PROPRIETORS.

We claim great advantages for the soil of Geneva and vicinity, in the production of healthy, long-lived trees. This is a matter of great importance to every planter. Not a year passes that we do not receive additional testimony of the fact that trees grown upon our heavy, strong, rich, well-drained soil are healthier, longer lived, less liable to injury from extreme cold, and more productive than when taken from a light soil. Another very important fact is that being furnished with a more abundant supply of healthy, well-ripened and fibrous roots, they bear transplanting to a different soil and climate much better.

All persons authorized to act as Agents for us, are provided with a written certificate to that effect, and we request that they be required to show their certificates. Should any person be found selling our trees without authority, and not furnished from the places not unfrequently sold by persons without authority, and not furnished from the places, we pretend to represent; by which means many poor trees and plants are distributed, causing great dissatisfaction and disappointment. BUY GOOD STOCK OF RELIABLE MEN, and this may be avoided.

STORIES ABOUT SNAKES.

Lots of Snakes.

Snakes are said to be more plentiful around the foothills and plains of Colorado this year than they have been for years. The intense heat and long dry spell is supposed to be the cause of the great number.

A Nine-foot Rattlesnake Killed.

A rattlesnake over nine feet long, carrying thirty-three rattles, was killed near Pikeville, Vanderburg County, Ind., the other day. Attention was called to it by a cow, which was bellowing loudly and pawing the earth seemingly in great terror, while the snake "held her with his glittering eyes."

Two Rattlesnakes Killed.

Covington (Ga.) Enterprise says: William Bell killed two rattlesnakes near James Stewart's place, in Rocky Plains District, one day last week. One of the reptiles had sixteen rattles and the other fourteen. It has been years since a rattlesnake was seen in this section, until Mr. Bell ran across this pair. He found them near a rock fence where a number of walnut trees are growing by the roadside.

Bitten by a Rattlesnake.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Farris, living west of town, was bitten by a rattlesnake which was lying coiled up in the road along which she was passing. As soon as possible after being bitten, by the management of Mrs. Van Hook, three chickens were killed and applied, when the poison from the wound would turn them green. She is improving very well now.

A Rattlesnake Bite Proves Fatal

OAKLAND, Ill., July 29.—While gathering berries, with several other ladies, near this city, yesterday, Mrs. J. Hanson was bitten by a rattlesnake. Her screams called the attention of her companions, who went to her assistance. She was placed in a wagon and started for home, but before she arrived she died. Her left limb, which was bitten, swelled to enormous proportions before death ensued.

Cure for Rattlesnake Bite.

Rattlesnake Jim, of Wooster, O., says that the only reliable cure for the bite of a rattlesnake is turpentine. He says that a bottle of turpentine held over the bitten spot, the unpurged mouth down, will draw out the poison, which can be seen as it enters the turpentine in a sort of blue flame. Although he has never been bitten, he has tried this cure on his dogs, always with success.—Toledo Blade.

Snakes y Express.

An express package from J. K. Rice of Gibbon, addressed to W. A. Conkling, Superintendent of Animals, Central Park, New York City, passed through Omaha yesterday. The package did not require the label, "Handle with care," as among its contents it numbered an immense rattlesnake with vicious fangs. Three crates of prairie dogs, the snake's cobabitants, were also included, as well as some cranes of peculiar feathering.—Omaha Herald.

The Snakes Move In.

WAYNESBURG, Pa., August 5.—A nest of copper-head snakes literally moved in and took possession of the house of Jephtha Shultz, living near this place. Yesterday Mrs. Shultz went into the yard for something, when she discovered a number of snakes crawling around. They were making for the house, and were of the copper-head variety. The lady tried to kill them, but she was unsuccessful and they took refuge under the house. This so frightened her that with her children she left the premises in possession of the reptiles, and when Mr. Shultz returned he found the enemy had taken possession. He killed two, the others got away, when he brought back his demoralized family.—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

Bitten by a Moccasin.

Near Covington, Wm. Everett, while fishing in the river, allowed his boat to drift near the bank, when a moccasin snake rushed in the boat and bit Mr. Everett on the bare foot twice. Mr. Everett corded the ankle promptly, mounted his horse and rode three-quarters of a mile home, and then drank about a pint of whiskey, which partially intoxicated him, and he thought the effects of the poison neutralized, but when the cord was slackened he began to have spasms, which continued at intervals for eight hours. Drs. A. C. Perry and J. A. White were called and administered the usual antidotes, and after an eight hours' contest, succeeded in relieving Mr. Everett, and he is thought to be now out of danger.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

Killed a Horned Snake.

Misses Sallie Miley and Lizzy Peer killed a horned snake on Sunday last in the cellar of Mr. James H. Hoover's house, on the river, a few miles south of this place. The young ladies were putting away the evening's milking when they discovered the hideous reptile, and at once attacked and killed it. It measured four feet in length and had a horn on the tail three-quarters of an inch long. These snakes are said to be deadly poisonous, and have a vicious and aggressive nature. Fortunately they are very scarce, but more of them have been seen and killed this season than for many years past. Snakes of all kinds are unusually plentiful this year, but we have heard of only one or two persons being bitten, none proving fatal.—Shenandoah (Va.) Herald.

Fight With a Mud Snake.

A Wellsville, O., man on going to his ice-house one evening last week, saw at the foot of a post two full-sized copper-head snakes. He describes them as looking very beautiful in the sunlight as in playful glee they would wriggle and twist around the foot of the pole, and seemingly try to climb it. He got a long pole and attempted to kill them, but they escaped down a hole. Coming along a little later he saw them going through the same antics, and managed to kill them with a long pole. Then, turning around, right at hand, he encountered a large "mud snake," which was not so easily dispatched. He fought bravely and with the venom and determination of a tiger, occasionally jumping as high as a man's head, and when opportunity offered would wind itself around the pole. Finally, however, it was safely dispatched.

The Rattlesnake's Jealousy Fange.

DEERBETTERS, Ill., August 8.—While gathering his crop of wheat to-day Mr. Joseph Totten, of Sussex County, had the misfortune to be bitten by a rattlesnake. The friends of Totten fear that the result will be fatal. About the middle of the forenoon he raked up a snake in a sheaf of wheat and while in the act of binding it the reptile squirmed from among the straw and bit him severely upon the second finger of the right hand. Upon discovering the snake, Totten and his men who were assisting gave chase, and with rakes and pitchforks succeeded in killing it. After killing the snake they at once cut the flesh around the bite and administered whisky in large quantities. Totten was then taken to a physician at Branchville, who canterized the wound. To night he complains of terrible pains in the arm, causing considerable alarm. The snake was five feet long and possessed seven rattles.

A Man and His Dogs Fight With a Rattlesnake.

CENTRALIA, Ill., August 8.—Mr. Essex Payne killed recently, on his place in Grand Prairie Township, several miles southeast of this city, in Jefferson County, a rattlesnake four feet and eight inches long with sixteen rattles. Mr. Payne stated that the snake looked as big as a bushel basket as it lay coiled up, ready to spring. Mr. Payne's two dogs had a lively fight with the snake, before he was killed, both being so badly bitten and poisoned that they swelled up fearfully before he reached home, and he was afraid he would lose them. But he administered to them a strong decoction of green cockleburrs, boiled in sweet milk, pouring it down the dogs' throats. One of them was so far gone that he had to be held up to be given the medicine. The remedy was effective, and in a short time he had the pleasure of seeing his dogs rapidly recover. J. R. C. —Globe-Democrat.

She Killed the Snakes.

On Monday, towards evening, Mrs. Robinson, a lady over 50 years old, and the mother-in-law of O. B. Meroy, of this place, went out in the field to pick berries for tea. While doing so she saw two immense rattlesnakes near the wall. Having nothing to kill them with she walked quite a distance to a fence from which she took a rail, and returning to the spot where she had seen the snakes, she found that they had moved, and were nearly hidden in the wall. She placed the rail on one of them and held it down, while she removed some of the stones so that she could get at it to kill it, and the other one in the meantime lay coiled up near by. Finally, after a long struggle, she succeeded in killing both of them. She brought their wriggling remains home on the rail with which she killed them. They were over three feet long and as thick through as a man's wrist. One had seven rattles and the other had ten.—Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Record.

Struck Three Times by a Rattlesnake.

A day or two ago, Mr. Joseph Jacobman, of this city, received a letter from a person in South Florida stating that a day or two previous to the writing of the letter, his son, Mr. Edward Jacobman, who was in the woods in the extreme southern part of the State, had been bitten by a rattlesnake, and but little hope of his recovery was entertained. It seems that while walking along through the woods he stepped into a little cluster of bushes where the snake was concealed, when it struck at him, its fangs entered his leg. Before he could get out of reach the snake struck him the second time, when he fell, and as he did so the snake struck him the third time. He was found and given the best of attention, but was, at the writing of the letter, in a very critical condition.

Mr. Jacobman thinks that his son, who was well known in this city, is dead, and that the letter was written as it was in order to prepare him for the worst, which is yet to come.—Florida Times-Union.

The Hoop Snake Does Exist.

KROOK, Ia., August 8.—The scientific editor of the Philadelphia News asserts that there is no such reptile as the hoop snake. He is certainly mistaken. That the snake is rare can not be denied, but that it exists is a settled fact, and it gains its name from the habit of forming itself into the shape of a hoop when alarmed. The hoop snake has been frequently seen in Texas, where curious creeping reptiles abound, and while there is no authenticated case of death from its bite, yet it is greatly feared by the natives, and especially the negroes. It is alleged that the snake carries its in a sack located near the tail, and that when alarmed it promptly reaches for the weapon of destruction, thus forming a veritable hoop. Stories of its locomotion, in this shape, are undoubtedly exaggerated, but there is little doubt of the existence of the reptile. It is considered deadly and the popular belief where it exists is that its poison will blight a tree. G. —Globe-Democrat.

Snakes in New Jersey.

Miljah Ort, of Stephentown, killed a black snake the other day which measured four feet and nine inches. John S. Dickerson, was at work in his hay field between Dover and Rockaway last Saturday, when he heard a hissing sound, and turning over some hay discovered a specimen of the ugly blowing adder, which he killed. The workmen along the new Morris County Railroad still continue to kill many venomous snakes in the neighborhood of Denmark. They crawl out from along the bank where they are working, and one or more copper-heads are killed every day. Last week they killed a large rattlesnake which was opened and found to contain two small squirrels.

Luff Sunneback, of the Shades of Death, near Hackensack, sat for over a quarter of a second on a large copper-head on Saturday last. The snake was coiled up by the side of an old log waiting for coons to come around. He tried to connect with Mr. Sunneback, but the latter was too nervous for him. Before he could creep away, after his failure, he was killed. He measured three feet and four inches. Mr. Sunneback says the snake felt like sliced cucumbers.—Newark (N. J.) Journal.

Rattlesnake Experience.

Mark Gilbert, of Mark West, killed a rattlesnake on his place last Thursday, and the same day a woman in the neighborhood killed two, which were after her chickens. One of them had a hole in its stomach. The one that Mr. Gilbert killed had a young rabbit in its stomach. The snake was three feet long and had nine rattles and a button. Mr. Gilbert has been on the place five years, and has killed thirteen rattlesnakes in that time. Last year one of them came near killing him. The rattlesnake bit him on the first joint of his right hand. He rushed into his house, drank a pint of whisky, and tied a small cord tight above the butt joint of the finger. His remedy was timely enough to save his life, but not his finger. Surgical treatment was required, with the amputation of the finger just below the bitten spot. The upper portion quickly assumed the variegated colors of the snake and the tip the shape of the serpent's head. He was prostrated a month from the effects of the venomous bite. There is deadly feud between Mr. Gilbert and the rattlesnakes. So far he is ahead—one finger missing, thirteen dead snakes. But it is not a pleasant warfare to continue.—Santa Rosa (Cal.) Republican.
